

CONSENT

About the Study

- This study is conducted by New York University researcher Marjorie Rhodes and Princeton researcher Sarah-Jane Leslie.

- This study seeks to find out:

How do children learn about different groups of people through stories?

- This study does not evaluate abilities of individual children. We are looking to understand how kids learn in general.

CONSENT

What Will My Child Do?

- Your child will watch a video or complete an online activity.
- Your child will proceed at his/her own pace the whole time.
- Sessions last no longer than 15 minutes.
- Parents must remain present for the duration of the study.

CONSENT

Webcam Recording

- Your child's responses will be video-recorded via your computer's webcam and microphone.
- You may review the recorded video after and request that all or any portion of the tapes be destroyed.
- All video data will be sent securely to our lab. No one outside the lab will have access to it.
- No identifying information will be linked to your child's recording.

CONSENT

Use of Data

- Recordings from this study will be stored on a password-protected server.
- At the end of your session, you will select a privacy level.
- Unless otherwise specified in your privacy settings:
 - Only lab members will access your data
 - Video clips will not be shared
 - Personal information will not be published

CONSENT

Participation

- Your and your child's participation are entirely voluntary.
- You may choose to stop the study session at any point without penalty.
- Please pause or stop the study if your child becomes fussy.

Risks & Benefits

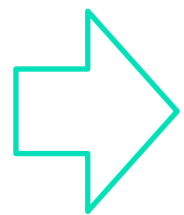

- There are no known risks to this kind of study.
 - Care has been taken to ensure that visual or motor fatigue are avoided
- Children usually very much enjoy these studies, but there are no direct benefits.
- These studies will (hopefully!) advance our understanding of how children learn about different groups of people.

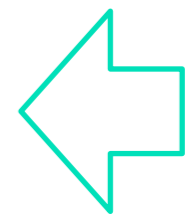

CONSENT

Now, we need the parent or legal guardian and the child participating in this study to give us their permission to be a part of our research.

First, we will ask for parents' permission. Then, on the next slide, we will ask for the kids'!

Parents: Please read the statement below out loud to consent.

“

I have read and understand the consent document. I am this child's parent or legal guardian, and we both agree to participate in this study.

”

*Note: If you or your child does not agree to participate, you can opt out of this study by exiting out of your browser. Your webcam will turn off, all video footage recorded up to this point will be deleted, and the file will be destroyed.

CONSENT

Perfect — now, let's hear from the kids!

Kids: Please answer the following question from us with a clear "yes" or "no" out loud.

Question: Would you like to do this online activity with us?

Please answer "yes"
or "no" out loud
now!

*Note: If you or your child does not agree to participate, you can opt out of this study by exiting out of your browser. Your webcam will turn off, all video footage recorded up to this point will be deleted, and the file will be destroyed.